

 Open access • Journal Article • DOI:10.1080/08111149008551428

Push from the Bush: Revitalisation Strategies for Smaller Rural Towns

— Source link

Paul Wildman, Robert Moore, Geoffrey Baker, David Wadley

Published on: 01 Jun 1990 - Urban Policy and Research (Taylor & Francis Group)

Topics: Local economic development and Social impact assessment

Related papers:

- Contemporary perspectives of small towns in India: A review
- Transferable Lessons from the New Towns Movement in the UK
- Economic reform, urban proximity and small town development in China : a tale of two towns
- Small Town Redevelopment: The Benefits and Costs of Local Economic Development in Alicedale
- Changing objectives in scottish new towns policy

Share this paper:

View more about this paper here: <https://typeset.io/papers/push-from-the-bush-revitalisation-strategies-for-smaller-37phwgijlp>

Push from the Bush: Revitalisation Strategies for Smaller Rural Towns

Paul Wildman, Robert Moore, Geoffrey Baker and David Wadley

Urban Policy and Research (1990) 8 (2) : 51-59.

Abstract

Generally, Australians consider that small towns are declining and there is not much that can be done about This paper argues that only certain sorts of towns (largely inland) are declining and that a lot can be done about it, provided there is the will. A small town in South-Western Queensland is used as a case study over a five year period and key issues are identified which can assist small towns to help themselves revitalise.

Keywords

small town revitalization; local economic development; social impact assessment

The full text of this article will be made available when copyright clearance has been obtained.